

Of the 100 billion garments produced each year, 92 million tons end up in landfills across the world.

Textiles can take up to 200+ years to decompose in landfills.

Fast fashion brands are producing twice the amount of clothes today than in 2000.

The average US consumer throws away nearly 81.5 pounds of clothes every year, leading to almost 11.3 million tons of textile waste in the United States annually.

